HALLOWEEN TRADITION

The history of Halloween

The story of Halloween began over two thousand years ago. Tribe called the Celts celebrated the end of summer on November 1st. They also believed that on October 31st, the night before the end of summer, the boundary between the world of the living and world of the dead broke. They also believed that the spirits returned to earth that day. To protect from those spirits, the Celts wore costumes like animals heads to scare them away. Later, November 1st was called All Saints' day to honour saints. The night before that was called All Hallows Eve also known as Halloween.

Now, Halloween is looking way different. Kids still dress up, but as monsters, for example vampires or zombies. They also go trick or treating. Trick or treating means going to someone's door and asking for a candy. Some people also make jack-o'-lanterns, which are pumpkins with curved face and a candle inside.

Advice from a cosplayer!

To make realistic things on your costume, for example witch's nose or realistic bones, you can easly make a clay!
You just need 1 spoon of vaseline and 1 spoon of flour and a bit of make up foundation in your skin tone, mix it together and there you go!
